She died at Swallowfield Park near Reading – a property of The Country Gentlemen's Association which was divided up into apartments, but with common dining and other facilities. I was working and living not too far away at the time – Camberley – and used to visit them fairly regularly. I believe she arranged her own departure, as she was suffering from cancer for some time before her death, which I believe was a result of her work in radiology in the 20s and 30s. Douglas outlived her for a couple of years.

- Here are the first 150 words of the article:
"This book was written for students and practitioners of chiropody. The first essential to good chiropody is a thorough knowledge of the anatomy of the leg and foot and some knowledge also of general anatomy. The book can be highly recommended as fulfilling the purpose for which it was written. The illustrations are satisfactory and the text is easily read. There is an appendix containing the B N A, revised and old terminology of anatomic structures. The author believes that chiropody should not be practiced by any one without a recognized diploma. The public will realize that as much harm can be done by an ignorant and unskilled chiropodist as by an unqualified dentist. The author looks forward to the day, which she hopes is not far distant, when a recognized diploma will be necessary for the legitimate practice of chiropody in England. She emphasizes the desirability of such a . . ."
